The 1 day evacuation plan

Some natural disasters, like hurricanes, can be predicted days in advance. In the best case scenario, you'll be given a voluntary evacuation warning first. This should give you plenty of time to put your evacuation plan into action and be ready to go if the disaster gets worse and forces you to leave your home.

On this chart, you're going to do what you did on the two previous pages, except this time, list any items marked "3" (those of lowest importance). Then, write down where they are located in the home and who is assigned to get each item during an evacuation.

Items to take	Location in the house	Who's assigned to grab it

© CrisisEquipped.com